As the end of the calendar year looms ahead, there are a number of “to do” items for employers to consider as it pertains to their retirement and health plans. For some employers, these include adopting year-end amendments, while for other employers it includes distributing notices and information. Our team of attorneys will discuss who should be thinking about what and where employers may need to allocate time and resources early next year.

In a two-part webinar series, Groom experts will outline key areas and deadlines impacting these plans.
